

Allergies

Allergies to laboratory animals may develop with prolonged exposure.

Personnel who have pre-existing allergies may be at increased risk for developing allergies to animals.

Allergies can be managed through the use of engineering controls, improved work practices and use of personal protective equipment.

Allergies can also develop to latex gloves and other latex materials.

Staff should be familiar with the signs and symptoms of allergies and the means of preventing allergies.

If you feel you have developed signs or symptoms of allergies, contact IUPUI Campus Health at 317-274-5887.